

why would θάρσ god create human, fully-knowing that this human will 'go' to hell?

foremost, we know, that god is good in goodness. he knows and loves us more than anyone and he always acts with intenting best for us taking in consideration our free will.

now, we don't know exactness of hell; we don't know many things.

we know, that neither in this world nor in world to come*{meaning, one after passing away; not - new creation}, blasphemy of spiritholy shall be forgiven; and, now, θάρσ blasphemy is unrepentance.

now, tartarus and hell are θάρσ real. and considering our knowledge, if we say, one will go to hell, that means, one will reject own true, perfect, beyond-all-loving father, despite gaining knowledge of θάρσ truth, and with such consciousness will not repent. - this is senselessness, though if it will be so, then whatever hell is, will be with intenting best toward them.

for every has sinned and been alienated from glory of god; no-one is righteous, not even one; though forgive and your father in heaven will forgive you, show mercy and mercy will be shown toward you. god is god; he is your answer.